

SHORT BIOGRAPHY

Dr. Dejan Marolov is Assoc. Professor at the Faculty of Law, Goce Delcev University, Stip, North Macedonia and a founding member of the European Scientific Institute. Supported by the European Commission, he pursued his graduate studies at the European Institute in Nice, France, where he earned his MA degree defending his thesis “Advanced European and International Studies”. He obtained his PhD in International Law from the European Center for Peace and Development (ECPD), affiliated with the University for Peace, established by the United Nations. Numerous international journals and periodicals have published his law and international relations academic papers. He authored more than six monographs. Prof. Marolov has reviewed scientific articles for respectable international journals, including the reputable “European Scientific Journal”. He has served on many national and international committees at scientific conferences and forums.

He is a member of several domestic and foreign academic non-government organisations, and associations and part of the organising boards of over 50 international conferences and postdoctoral level workshops. He is a member of the Academic Council of the UN System. He is a member of the Scientific Council of the Center for Legal and Economic Studies at the University of Azores in Ponta Delgada, Portugal, and a member of the Scientific Board of the International Center for Human Rights at the Mediterranean University of Reggio Calabria, Italy. Furthermore, he is a member of the European Scientific Institute, the Center for Legal and Political Research at the Faculty of Law at Goce Delcev University, The Association of Doctoral Students and Young Researchers, the Association of Historians of the Republic of Macedonia, and the European Movement in the Republic of Macedonia. He is a member of several faculty commissions.

CV: <https://scholar.ugd.edu.mk/dejanmarolov/cv>